With Halleloijahs to our king.

With mountain wing we'll then explore,
The land of rest, view Canaan's shore—
With Angels in our choir—
Celestial sounds will strike the ear,
And banish sorrow, grief and fear,
And banish sorrow, grief and fear,
And banish sorrow, grief and fear,
Co-God of Heaven—take thou away,
From me all sin I humbly pray—
Let not the De'il beguife,
Frotect, and guard, where'er I co,
Thy Logan, in thievale of, woe,
And cheer him with thy smile.
And when, with me, all time shall end,
Be thou, my God, my guide, my friend,

Not many days since I took a short walk in our favourite and much frequented promonade.
"the Greep," with mind all alive to the beaudies of nature, seeking gratification in its charmingly diversified scenery. Soldom have I be sheld a more grand or magnificent spectacle than that which broke upon my admiring view. Thick, lowering ciouis had darkened our mid day sky, and the heavens assumed a black and the above a seeking assumed as lock and the sheld are seeking assumed. threstening aspect. But, it was now evening, and the sun, having oun his diusnal round, was seeking a peaceful retreat in the bosons of the eccans the clouds were dispersed, and a rain-bow of the liveliest, and most glowing colours arched the azure firmsment. The winds had arched the azure firmament. The winds had ceased their dismal howlings, and only light zephyrs whispered in the custling leaves. The reflection of the sun upon the few remaining clouds, which hung as it were, on the skirts of the heaveus, afforded a noble spectacle to the admirer of the glurious phenomena of hattre. As I stood admiring this sublime and majestic appearance, my mind, at all times romantic, was filled with enthusiasm. I thought of the transient and precarious condition of main, who, like the hilly of the vale, to day is and to morrow is not whose carrer is so swift. and to morrow is not whose carrer is so swift

FROM THE SEAT OK WAR.

The Paris papers of the 28th of September, contain the account of the cyriclusion of peace, as given in the London Allas of the 27th.—There was also a runnour on the same day, of the renewal of hostilities between the Russians and the Turks. This report was somewhat strengthened on the 28th, by the following extract of a commercial letter from Vienna, dated September 13:—

At the opening of the Exchange to day.

September 13:—

At the opening of the Exchange to day, Bank actions were at 1193, but they fell suddenly to 1190. This fall is attributed to the rup ure of negotiations, serious commotions at Constantinople and the definitive march of the Russian forces on the Touchi, positive parts. Russian forceson the Turkish capital.'

It is somewhat suspicious that no dates are given for this intelligence of the "definitive march" of the Russian forces. The following intelligence from Adrianople of the 9-h September, as given by the Augsburg Gazette, is
